As of today, the Treaty on the Customs Code of the Eurasian Economic Union (hereinafter – the ‘EAEU Customs Code’) is in process of signing. It is expected that the document will come into force not earlier than 29 December 2017.

Below is a brief overview of the main developments of the EAEU Customs Code.

1. Structure of the code

Compared to the Customs Code of the Customs Union the EAEU Customs Code is not divided into general and special parts and will consist of 60 chapters joined in 9 sections.

2. Codification of provisions of the Customs Union international treaties

3. Preliminary information

The mechanism of provision of preliminary information by the customs authorities was improved. From now this information will be used for expediting of performance of customs operations and optimization of customs control and will be divided into 2 types:

- ▶ information used by the customs authorities for evaluation of risks and choice of the customs control forms – its provision is obligatory;
- ▶ information used by the customs authorities for expediting of performance of the customs operations and optimization of the customs control – provided at discretion of persons who are able to provide it.

The preliminary information provided in electronic form may be used upon arrival of goods to the EAEU territory, placement of goods under temporary storage as well as upon customs declaring procedure.

4. Customs declaring procedure

The most important, in our view, developments, related to customs declaring procedure are as follows:

- ▶ electronic declaring procedure is prevailing, while the written declaring procedure is allowed in exceptional cases;
- ▶ a submission of declaration on goods is allowed without providing the customs authorities with the documents confirming the declared data. The exception may be made in case the customs authorities are not able to obtain such data from information systems;
- ▶ a period of registration or refusal in registration of the customs declaration is reduced to 1 working hour;
- ▶ a period of release of goods upon registration of the customs declaration is reduced to 4 working hours.

Transitional provisions are stipulated in section 9 of the EAEU Customs Code among which the following may be distinguished:
