Is the law on the Sovereign Runet so terrible?

On November 1, amendments to the laws "On Communications" and "On Information", which are known as the Law on Sovereign Internet (Runet), adopted in the spring of 2019, come into force. Authorities claimed that it was taken to protect the Russian segment of the network from a possible outage. However, critics say the document brings Russia closer to the closed Internet - similar to China or North Korea. The authors of the law are senators Andrei Klishas and Lyudmila Bokova, as well as deputy Andrei Lugovoi.
